Towhey fired over football?

More questions raised about mayor's actions.
Rob Ford fires his chief of staff as the crack scandal rages on

JESSICA SMITH
jessica.smith@metronews.ca

Mayor Rob Ford slipped out of city hall quietly Thursday as his brother distracted the media — both refusing to take questions on the crack-video scandal or the reason the mayor's chief of staff was fired.

"We don't discuss personnel issues with anyone," Doug Ford told the reporters assembled outside the mayor's office, as his brother left the building.

He wouldn't say whether former chief of staff Mark Towhey had resigned or been fired, or comment on the crack issue, but took questions about the mayor's firing as coach of the Don Bosco Eagles football team, saying the mayor still believed the team would be victorious next year.

The mayor's new chief of staff, Earl Provost, was promoted from deputy chief of staff. Last year, he was named interim chief of staff before Towhey was hired. He has been active on the football file.

Torstar News Service reported that Provost personally urged Queen's Park to help bankroll $2.8 million in renovations to Don Bosco Catholic Secondary School's football facilities, in March 2012. Torstar also reported that's he's a federal Liberal on relatively good terms with Grits at Queen's Park, but no money was given.

Towhey was escorted out of city hall Thursday afternoon and told the press as he was leaving, "I am no longer the chief of staff. I did not resign."

Asked about the crack scandal, he said, "I've given the mayor my advice. He can choose to take it or not take it."

One councillor, Ward 25's Jaye Robinson, said the mayor's office told her Towhey was fired not over the alleged crack video, but over something to do with football. But when pressed on why the mayor would fire his chief of staff during the middle of a scandal because of football, she could only say that football has always been "an ongoing theme" with the mayor.

On Wednesday, Toronto's Catholic school board announced it was banning Mayor Ford from coaching.

The school board came to the decision before the scandal erupted, as it was reviewing his comments in a Sun News interview that many players "come from gangs" and from "broken homes," and "just wouldn't go to school" and would have "no reason to go to school" if not for football.

According Robinson, executive council members had discussed Towhey's possible removal in the past, but the timing of his firing was a surprise. "There's been concern from members of council and I don't think Coun. (Doug) Ford has ever been a fan, but the mayor has often defended Mark Towhey and kept him in his capacity," said Robinson.

BREAKING NEWS...

→ The drug dealers who allegedly videoed Mayor Rob Ford smoking crack have gone quiet, according to Gawker and the Toronto Star's Robyn Doolittle, one of the reporters who viewed the video.

→ "Hey, Rob Ford Crack Tape Owner, if you're reading this: Please get in touch with our mutual friend. If you don't, you risk leaving a lot of money on the table," posted by Gawker's John Cook.

Tough shoes to fill

Mayor's chief of staff. Hiring another replacement won't be easy under siege

Wanted: Thick-skinned staffer to take on drug scandal at centre of worldwide media circus. Long hours of complete silence. Must be able to stage manage gaffe-prone boss. Recognition doubtful even in the event of success. Football coaching experience a plus.

After Mayor Rob Ford's chief of staff Mark Towhey was shown the door Thursday, the mayor will need a new adviser to manage the media storm focused on a video that appears to show him smoking crack cocaine. But who would want to take on such a daunting position at this critical moment?

"I wouldn't take that job for a million dollars," said a former chief of staff from a previous mayoral administration.

Even without the drug scandal, Ford has had difficulty keeping good people on at city hall and trouble filling their posts when they leave. More than a dozen senior managers have departed since Ford took office less than three years ago. In that time, he also worked his way through three chiefs of staff.

Ford's handling of the crack video crisis — refusing to comment other than calling the allegations "ridiculous" — has been widely criticized as a colossal PR blunder and has spurred speculation of friction behind the scenes.

"Rob Ford is an unusual political brand," said Ken Wong, a professor of marketing at Queen's University. Chiefs of staff used to projecting an image of leadership, politics and power may have a difficult time working with Ford, who "is the antithesis of that."

Mark Towhey TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"That office has been a revolving door since Ford has got it. I don't know who would want the job," said an adviser to a former mayor. "It's certainly not going to pay off for your career … You've got to be pretty desperate for employment."

Moreover, he said, the possibility of making a positive impact on the situation is slim.

The way Ford uses his brother as a de facto chief of staff makes the prospect of being his real chief of staff unpalatable, said another former senior mayoral staffer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"You've got the title and you have no authority," he said.

"(Ford) is not taking any advice from anybody. I think the only person he's listening to is his brother. His modus operandi is to deny events occurred until he's absolutely forced to admit that they happened, and I think that he thinks he can wait it out," he said.

Ainslie admits to RIDE suspension

Paul Ainslie at a press conference Thursday. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Toronto Coun. Paul Ainslie is the second city politician this year to face a media frenzy over a drinking and driving incident.

The veteran councillor acknowledged Thursday that he was stopped by a RIDE spot check May 3 and was given a warning that required him to surrender his driver's licence for three days. He was not charged.

In January, Coun. Ana Bailao announced at a city hall news conference that she had pleaded guilty to a drunk driving charge she'd earlier pledged to fight.

Ainslie (Ward 43, Scarborough East) said police stopped him as he was driving home from a dinner with friends during which he had consumed two or three glasses of wine.

The Ford ally, picked by the mayor to chair the government management committee, said he thought enough time had elapsed for the alcohol to wear off.

"I felt that having innuendo about me driving under the influence needed to be cleared up, and that's why I'm standing before you here today," Ainslie told reporters.

AFFORDABLE, SUSTAINED FUNDING IS KEY TO IMPROVED TRANSIT

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Last week, I called for an increase in affordable transit funding to keep Toronto moving.

Not so long ago, the TTC was funded by a formula that saw operating costs split 50-50 between the City and the province. This arrangement reflected the importance of Toronto's transit to Ontario's economy. The City does apply a percentage of the provincial gas tax towards the TTC's operating subsidy, and the province still invests in capital projects, such as the acquisition of new vehicles. This is certainly appreciated, but since 1997, the TTC's operating costs have been borne almost exclusively by Toronto property taxpayers, and through the farebox by TTC riders.

This has led to the TTC becoming one of the most efficient transit systems in the western world with 70 per cent of its operating costs recovered from fares alone.

By comparison, Sydney's RailCorp receives the inverse; that is, they are subsidized by the state of New South Wales to the tune of 70 per cent, with the balance coming from fares.

Whatever the rights or wrongs of Toronto's arrangement, I am certainly clear on one thing, namely that the TTC cannot continue to accommodate millions more rides without an affordable increase in subsidy. The TTC's subsidy has been frozen for the last two years, during which we have absorbed the cost of providing 28 million additional rides.

These are tough times, and the TTC will, of course, continue to look for internal efficiencies to minimize the cost of our operations. But to run the third largest transit system in North America, we need to know more than a few months in advance what funds will be available so we can plan for the forthcoming year's worth of service. And that funding needs to reflect the exponential ridership growth in Toronto as the city expands.

As head of the TTC, I am calling for a return to an affordable, sustained funding stream from the City and province that will allow the TTC to continue to improve your transit system.

TTC OPENS NEW, UNFINISHED CONCOURSE AT UNION STATION

This week, the TTC reached a significant milestone in the Second Platform and Concourse Improvements Project at Union Station by opening two new sets of doors, stairs and the unfinished concourse. This phase of construction is necessary to progress into the next stages, where the existing doors in the moat will be closed and further excavation of the new second platform will commence.

One of the most difficult tasks in renovating a major transit hub is completing projects both above and below ground, while keeping the station open for business. By opening the concourse in an unfinished state, contractors can move onto the next phase more quickly and prevent potential damage to new finishes that will be installed in 2014.

The west half of the second platform, under the new concourse, is close to structural completion. In order to excavate the east end of the platform, the Brookfield Place rotunda entrance has been closed. Pedestrian access from the moat to the PATH and Front Street has been maintained by temporary stairs at the east and west ends of the site, and over the Brookfield Place rotunda entrance.

Customers will see the closure of existing moat doors and the south-east portion of the old concourse in the coming weeks as contractors shift the work site to the east end of the moat. Additional TTC customer service representatives will be available during the morning peak periods to manage congestion, answer questions, direct pedestrians and represent TTC.

As always, we appreciate your patience as we work to modernize the TTC.

Athletes' village hits halfway mark

Pan Am Games. On time, on budget

The once-deserted West Don Lands area is well on its way to becoming the Canary District, one of Toronto's newest neighbourhoods.

But first, the site will become the CIBC Pan Am and Parapan Am Athletes' Village, home to the thousands of athletes, coaches and officials who will attend the international sporting event in 2015. And as of this month, the project is halfway done, on schedule and on budget, Games officials say.

"This village will be the most visible reminder the Games are coming to Toronto," Ian Troop, president and chief executive officer of TO2015, told a news conference Thursday. "Whenever people look from the DVP, or flock to the city by train, they can see the progress that is being made here."

The Pan Am Games will run July 10 to 26, 2015. The Parapan Am Games will take place Aug. 7 to 14, 2015.

'Mental health issues.' Woman who stole deceased's purse spared charges

Police say no charges will be laid against a woman who took the purse of another woman who died after jumping onto the tracks at the College subway station Wednesday morning.

Investigators have identified the purse thief, said Toronto police Const. Victor Kwong, but will not release her name.

"After an interview, it became apparent that the woman was dealing with mental health issues," police said in a statement released Thursday. "As a result, no charges will be laid."

Police have also now identified the woman who died on the tracks.

The search for the purse began shortly after the deceased woman jumped to her death at the College station during the morning rush hour, leaving her purse behind on the platform. In the ensuing confusion, another woman walked over, picked up the purse and left.

Without the identification presumably in the purse, police had difficulty identifying the suicide victim.

Police later released security camera stills and asked for the public's help to identify the woman who took the purse.

Travelling sales. Wynne on the road to promote budget

Premier Kathleen Wynne is crisscrossing Ontario selling the provincial budget now that she's confident it's going to pass.

In Thunder Bay Thursday, Wynne was promoting the minority Liberal government's $295-million youth jobs strategy designed to create 30,000 jobs.

"Across the province youth employment is a challenge. It is about 16.5 per cent, which is twice the adult unemployment rate," Wynne told reporters after touring a youth employment services centre in the Lakehead.

Wynne was quick out the chute earlier this week when NDP Leader Andrea Horwath finally announced she would be supporting the 2013-14 budget, which means a spring election will be averted. Horwath gave her blessing after winning several concessions from the Liberals, including a financial accountability office similar to one in Ottawa.

Premier Kathleen Wynne
THE CANADIAN PRESS

With respect to the youth employment strategy, Wynne said there are several components, including a youth employment fund to assist employers in hiring young workers and providing financial support for young entrepreneurs.

"I think it is our responsibility as a government where there are good ideas, where there are young people with business ideas, to allow them to have access to some start-up capital and some support in putting together a business plan," she said.

Breast cancer. Ont. researcher explains breakthrough

Western University's John P. Wiebe has turned up hormones that could change the way some breast-cancer patients are treated. ANGELA MULLINS/METRO IN LONDON

The lead researcher of a Western University breast-cancer study says he has identified new hormones that "may suppress breast cancer and stimulate the regression of breast tumours."

Prof. John P. Wiebe's work was recently published in the Breast Cancer Research journal.

"Basically, we've got the first explanation of what causes receptor-negative breast cancer," said Wiebe, who works in London, Ont.

There are two types of breast cancer: receptor-negative and receptor-positive. Receptor-negative cases, which Wiebe says have the higher mortality rate of the two, do not respond to hormonal therapies such as tamoxifen. That means patients are forced into chemo or radiation therapy immediately.

Wiebe's discovery, however, could turn the tide.

Drone strikes necessary in fight against terror: Obama

Security policy. U.S. president also announces a renewed push to close Guantanamo Bay

U.S. President Barack Obama on Thursday defended America's controversial drone attacks as legal, effective and a necessary linchpin in an evolving U.S. counterterrorism policy. But he acknowledged the targeted strikes are no "cure-all" and said he is haunted by the civilians unintentionally killed.

The president also announced a renewed push to close the Guantanamo Bay detention centre in Cuba, including lifting a moratorium on prisoner transfers to Yemen. However, shutting the prison will still require help from Republicans reluctant to back Obama's call to move some detainees to U.S. prisons and try them in civilian courts.

Obama framed his address as an attempt to redefine the nature and scope of terror threats facing the U.S.

"Neither I, nor any president, can promise the total defeat of terror," Obama said in remarks at the National Defence University. "What we can do ... is dismantle networks that pose a direct danger, and make it less likely for new groups to gain a foothold."

The highly secretive program of unmanned spy drones has faced criticism from congressional lawmakers who have questioned its scope and legality. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Haunted by deaths

The president defended targeted drone killings as both effective and legal.

- He acknowledged the civilian deaths that sometimes result.
- "For me, and those in my chain of command, these deaths will haunt us as long as we live," he said.

Texas vote

Boy Scouts to accept openly gay kids

Local leaders of the Boy Scouts of America voted Thursday to ease a divisive ban and allow openly gay boys to be accepted into the nation's leading youth organization — one of the most dramatic moves the organization has made in a century. Gay adults will remain barred from serving as Scout leaders.

RCMP given Senate documents

Expense claim scandal. Debate continues to rage over report as Sen. Duffy shrugs off suggestions he should resign

The Senate has turned over documents to the Mounties to help their investigation into improper expense claims.

Senate Speaker Noel Kinsella says the RCMP's sensitive and international investigations unit is examining the claims of senators Mike Duffy, Mac Harb and Patrick Brazeau.

The police asked for documents related to the Senate's travel and expenses policies.

A debate is still raging over whether Conservatives on a committee reviewing Duffy's expenses whitewashed their report into the matter. The controversy grew Thursday as the Conservative in charge of the probe admitted he got advice from Stephen Harper's team.

Sen. David Tkachuk, one of a three-member special subcommittee studying Duffy's housing expenses, told Maclean's magazine that he spoke to people in Harper's office — including former chief of staff Nigel Wright — about the issue.

Duffy spoke out Thursday for the first time since the scandal erupted last week, insisting that he looks forward to a complete airing of all the facts and dismissing suggestions he should resign his Senate seat.

Privacy policy. Official wants power to impose big fines on big companies

Canada's privacy commissioner Jennifer Stoddart says she's tried naming and shaming some of the world's largest companies into respecting the privacy of Canadians.

But, she admits, it hasn't really worked.

So she wants to hit them where it hurts: on companies' bottom lines.

Stoddart wants Canada's Federal Court to have the power to impose punishing penalties when organizations run afoul of privacy laws. And not a slight slap on the wrist that companies can budget for, she's talking fines in the neighbourhood of eight figures.

Pointing to a record-high $22.5-million US fine successfully levied against Google last year by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission, Stoddart says there's no reason Canada can't be just as tough.

"That kind of fine gets the attention of the organization the way my requests to change their practices and give us a report doesn't," says Stoddart.

"I think that's what's needed. You need something to capture the attention of (companies about) the importance of Canadian regulation for operating in Canada with Canadians' personal information. It has to be significant enough so that investors, financial analysts and so on will go, 'Whoops, what's happening here?'"

Stoddart's comments followed a speech at a conference in Toronto hosted by the Canadian chapter of the International Association of Privacy Professionals, where she released a position paper suggesting that the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act is weak, outdated and in need of a major update.

She noted the act came into effect before Facebook and Twitter were launched and before legislators could imagine the implications of technologies like Google's Street View.

Among the recommendations in her paper are calls for a range of financial penalties that could be imposed by Federal Court, the ability to order organizations to halt privacy-infringing activities and a requirement that companies report breaches of personal information.

Cleveland

Hero will never have to pay for another burger

The man who famously put down his Big Mac to help rescue three women held captive for a decade in an Ohio house will never have to pay for another burger in his hometown.

Charles Ramsey has been promised free burgers for life at more than a dozen Cleveland-area restaurants.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer reports that the restaurant where Ramsey worked as a dishwasher initially created a special burger in his honour, but eateries in the city decided a larger tribute was due.

Ramsey was called a hero after helping Amanda Berry, Gina DeJesus and Michelle Knight break out of the house May 6. Ariel Castro is now facing charges.

The newspaper says Ramsey was travelling and would get his "Chuck Card" when he returns.

Alleged would-be terrorist wants lawyer to cite Qur'an

Accused in VIA Rail case. Suspect says he does not recognize the secular Criminal Code

Police allege Chiheb Esseghaier and another man were conspiring to derail a VIA Rail passenger train. FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

A man charged in the alleged plot to attack a VIA Rail passenger train says he wants to be represented by a lawyer who will use the Qu'ran as a reference in his case.

"I am agreed to have a lawyer," Chiheb Esseghaier said, appearing in a Toronto court by video link from jail on Thursday.

"But I wish this lawyer can co-operate with me, because I need the holy book as reference for my judgment. I don't want a book written by humans."

The 30-year-old Montreal man told court during an earlier appearance that he does not recognize the authority of the secular Criminal Code.

Both Esseghaier and 35-year-old Raed Jaser of Toronto are charged with conspiracy to murder for the benefit of a terrorist group, participating in a terrorist group and conspiring to interfere with transportation facilities for the benefit of a terrorist group.

The RCMP calls the case the first known alleged plot in Canada directed by al-Qaida.

The justice of the peace told Esseghaier he would have to discuss his wishes with his lawyer once one has been assigned.

He was scheduled to return to court June 3 to provide an update on his request. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Second suspect

Jaser silent on the issue

Raed Jaser also appeared by video link and was scheduled for another court appearance on June 25 as his case goes through the disclosure process.

One of his lawyers, Brydie Bethell, said she has not heard Jaser making similar remarks about the legitimacy of Canada's criminal laws.

"The client has not made any comment like that to me," she said.

London. Muslim radicals say they know suspect in bloody street slashing

A man seen wielding a butcher knife after the killing of a British soldier on the streets of London was described as a convert to Islam who took part in demonstrations with a banned radical group, two Muslim hardliners said on Thursday.

Police raided houses in connection with the slaying. In addition to the two suspects who were hospitalized after being shot by police, authorities said they had arrested a man and a woman, both 29, on suspicion of conspiracy to murder.

Authorities have not identified either wounded suspect.

Anjem Choudary, the former head of the radical group al-Muhajiroun, said that the man depicted in a startling video of the event was named Michael Adebolajo, a Christian who converted to Islam around 2003 and took part in several demonstrations by the group.

Omar Bakri Muhammad, who now lives in Lebanon but had been a radical Muslim preacher in London, also said he recognized the man as Adebolajo and said he attended his lectures in the early 2000s.

Bakri, speaking from Lebanon, said he remembers Adebolajo as a "shy person" who was keen to learn about Islam and asked interesting questions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Electronics importers say feds duped them over tariff breaks

Paper trail. Coalition says it has documents showing officials let products in duty-free, knowing levies would be claimed later on

The flap over electronics tariffs has also involved iPods. On Wednesday, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty was asked at a committee hearing about exemptions for iPods. GETTY IMAGES FILE

Importers of popular electronics such as big-screen TVs and MP3 players are ramping up their fight against federal tariff changes, accusing the government of misleading them by offering tariff breaks that it planned to claw back later.

Importers of televisions are already on the hook for about $16 million in retroactive duties from 2011 after last year's crackdown on a particular tariff exemption that has become a political football.

Electronics brought to Canada under exemption 9948 are supposed to be used continuously for four years while hooked up to a computer, and importers are required to provide an "end-user certificate" proving that's how each device was used.

No such end-user certificates for consumer electronics exist, something officials at the Canada Border Services Agency have acknowledged in internal emails.

Now a coalition of importers says it has documents that prove border officials allowed them to import products duty-free, knowing the government would claim the tariffs and penalty costs at a later date.

NDP reaction

- New Democrats, whom the Conservatives accused of planning an "iPod tax" in 2010, jumped on the latest revelations.
- "It's now clear that despite repeated denials, the Conservatives have been meticulously planning to impose a tax on iPods and other electronic goods and apply it retroactively," Murray Rankin, the NDP critic for National Revenue, said in a release.

No-fair trade. Feds may fire back over U.S. meat labelling

The federal government is threatening "retaliatory measures" against the United States in a dispute over meat-labelling rules that Ottawa and the World Trade Organization consider discriminatory.

The U.S. government has announced new regulations on so-called country of origin labelling that would track beef and hogs through the meat processing and distribution systems.

Canada objects to the labelling system on the grounds that it is costly, burdensome and will lead to the "disintegration" of the North American supply chain.

"Canada is extremely disappointed with the regulatory changes put forward by the United States today," Agriculture Minister Gerry Ritz and Trade Minister Ed Fast said in a joint release Thursday.

"Canada will consider all options at its disposal, including, if necessary, the use of retaliatory measures," said the government release.

1 YouTube Comedy Week. The future of comedy is on display this week as YouTube's first annual Comedy Week showcases the best funny stuff on its channel, with its comic stars like Jenna Marbles, Smosh, Epic Meal Time and Danisnotonfire — who all became famous there. Lesson? Instead of hitting amateur comedy clubs or driving to L.A. in your beat-up Jeep, just go on YouTube to showcase your talent.

2 Boston Rob. Reality fans love him for his appearances on Survivor (he was "sole survivor" in Season 22) and The Amazing Race. Well now Rob Mariano, a.k.a. Boston Rob, has released a book called The Boston Rob Rulebook: Strategies for Life, based around his strategic thinking and social awareness that you can apply to your own life. Because life is really one big game of survivor.

3 Tumblr says Yahoo! In its continued efforts to put itself on the map again, Yahoo bought media network Tumblr for $1.1 billion US. This could be a huge move in Yahoo's comeback attempt, as CEO Marissa Mayer tries to breathe new life into this Internet icon. Now this will definitely make Yahoo hipper, though some may equate purchasing indie Tumblr as selling out to aging hipsters.

4 @ThatEricAlper. With 127,000-plus followers on Twitter, Canadian music expert Eric Alper links to some of the best music/pop culture gems on the web, from 50 albums to play after a breakup, to nine people who were banned from Saturday Night Live, to a super-cut of film characters screaming "Noooooooooo!" Follow him to be a cool cat.

5 Roboteyes. This synthpop band calls themselves "the soundtrack to the greatest John Hughes movie never made." With their new-wave-era sound, roboteyes' self-titled debut is well worth a listen at roboteyes.bandcamp.com. Their song Break My Heart should be a hit song. It would have been in the '80s.

6 Buzzfeed. It's one of the hottest news sites on the planet right now, and what it does better than anyone is capture and fuel posts going viral — whether it's pictures of cute cats, photo bombs, YouTube videos or breaking news. Buzzfeed gets that people want to discover and share things — from the silly to the serious and everything in between.

7 MS Walk. MS Walks happen in 160 communities across Canada, bringing together people who have been impacted by multiple sclerosis and raising money for research and support programs. I'm walking in one this Sunday in Peterborough with my wife and kids in support of our friend who has been battling the disease. Learn more about these walks at mswalks.ca.

8 Hadfield's space guitar. Chris Hadfield didn't just make space travel really cool — he also made more people want to be guitar heroes. After Hadfield performed Bowie's Space Oddity in space while playing a Vancouver-made Larrivée guitar, that guitar has now been brought back into production for a limited run due to demand. The first guitar rock star on Mars could be you.

9 Kevin Durant. His jersey was photographed hanging amidst the rubble from the tornado in Moore, Okla. And the NBA star proved once again how down-to-Earth and charitable he is when he donated $1 million US to help the recovery efforts there. His Oklahoma City Thunder and the NBA soon followed suit, donating $1 million as well.

10 Teens and Twitter. A new study from the Pew Research Center reveals Twitter is becoming a go-to social-media destination for teens who say there is too much drama (and parent surveillance) on Facebook. When parents see this, they will get on Twitter and start following their kids there. Dear teens, there is no escape in the social-media world either. Now go clean your rooms.

11 Avery. Speaking of teens, my daughter Avery becomes a teenager next week — yes, she turns 13. I always wanted to give her a shout-out on this list — I love her so much (and my youngest daughter, Chloe). So Avery, there you go. Cool Dad? Yeah, OK, maybe. Now go clean your room.

MICHAEL MARKIETA/ARUP

The point is you can see flight patterns

A Canadian geographic analyst has transformed aviation data into striking visualisations of flight paths.

Michael Markieta, 23, used more than 58,000 paths, which trace the outlines of the continents. Markieta spent the past year developing the graphics for design and engineering firm Arup, to see how the world is connected.

Future Eglinton Crosstown Light Rail Transit

Under Review by Metrolinx

Underground Crosstown Line and Stops

At Grade Crosstown Line and Stops

Transportation Study

The underground portion of the new Eglinton Crosstown Light Rail Transit (LRT) will run for 12km between Black Creek Drive and Brentcliffe Road (with a proposed extension to Don Mills). As a result of this new underground transit service, some bus/carpool lanes may no longer be needed. As part of the Eglinton Connects Planning Study, the City of Toronto is investigating options for making the best use of this roadway space to serve all users, including pedestrians, cyclists and motorists.

This Transportation Study will follow a Municipal Class Environmental Assessment (Class EA) Schedule 'C' process, which includes identifying the problem/opportunity, developing and evaluating a reasonable range of alternative solutions, and providing opportunities for public input.

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Fast & Furious medley

Nothing new. Now at the half-dozen mark, auto action series' latest film is more like a greatest hits mashup than its own creation

Richard: Mark, this is the culmination of the previous five. A greatest hits — literally, there are some wild crashes here — featuring characters from most of the films in the series. All the old faves are back — drug lord Braga, Hobbs and even Letty who was presumed dead in the last instalment — in a story that doesn't make a great deal of sense, but if it was supposed to make sense it would be called Sedans and Sensibility or maybe Of Miatas and Men. But no, this is a Fast & Furious movie that plays fast and furious with believability but still delivers a pretty good time at the movies. What's your take?

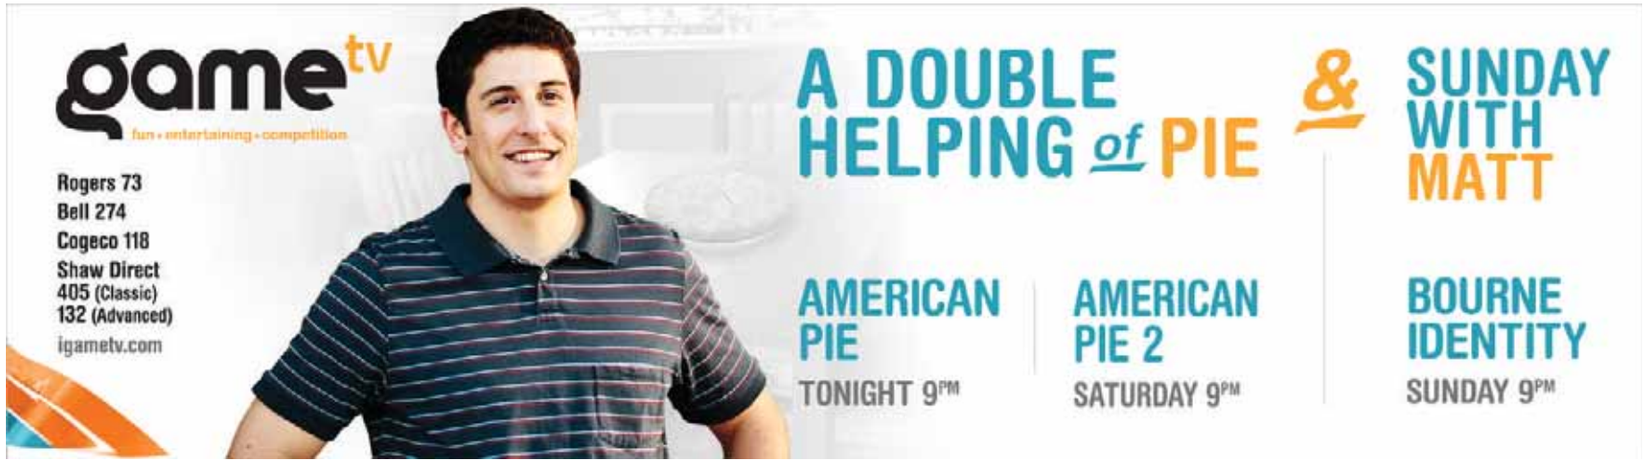
MB: SPOILER ALERT: THERE ARE CAR CRASHES IN THIS MOVIE. Richard, I'm so glad we got a sixth instalment of the franchise because somehow there were just too many unexplored nuances in the first five. But if it's action you're after, you won't be disappointed. You're right; the story is secondary; in fact, almost irrelevant. But the relationships among the characters also seem unimportant here. There seemed to be more emotional connection in Fast and Furious 2, 3, and 5 — or was it 1, 3, and 4? Anyway, you get my point. But things certainly go boom.

RC: They sure do. The action scenes here feature the fanciest stunt driving this side of Evel Knievel. To quote the movie, "We're talking vehicular warfare!" And that's what people want to see from these movies. Sure the talk of friendship and loyalty is the overriding theme, but that wouldn't mean much if cars don't become airborne before they burst into flames. What did you think of Vin Diesel?

MB: SPOILER ALERT: THERE ARE FIST FIGHTS IN THIS MOVIE. Richard, Vin Diesel has less personality than some of the cars. And Paul Walker must have been cast ages ago to make him look like a trained actor. The truth is, I'd watch these movies if they used crash test dummies in the leads. The pyrotechnics are dazzling and the cars are great to look at. Toward the end of the film there's a stunt that's so breathtaking it transcends the actors involved. So Diesel is as good as the film needs him to be.

RC: I liked how every line he speaks sounds as though he's dragging it through sandpaper.

MB: If there were ever a guy who needed auto-tune, it's Vin Diesel.



Old Stock is a little film that's full of charm and cast of quirky characters

Beautifully absurd. Canadian film about a teen who hides from the world in a retirement home stands out in summer blockbuster season

IAN GORMELY
scene@metronews.ca

Old Stock opens next Friday. HANDOUT

Another summer of blockbuster films is upon us, delivering a new slate of larger than life, and largely infallible, heroes ready to save the world from whatever super villain/alien entity/folly-of-man currently plagues the earth.

Flying under the radar though are smaller-scale flicks like Old Stock.

The Canadian film follows Stock, played by Noah Reid, a troubled teen who's chosen to withdraw from life's rat race by hiding out in a retirement home with his grandfather.

"It's beautifully absurd," says Reid of the film's premise.

"(The) writing is offbeat and wonderful."

Reid describes Stock as "an intense guy," and, "an old soul," something the social-media averse actor can sympathize with.

But Stock takes it to a whole other level. "People have things in their lives that they have trouble moving past," he says.

But Stock's approach — to essentially drop out of life — might not be the best strategy.

Stock's world is thrown into flux after an incident triggered by his past results in his eviction; at the same time he meets the home's dance instructor Patti, played by Melanie Leishman.

"Patti is immediately drawn to Stock," says Leishman. Reid agrees.

"I think there's something about a troubled guy that appeals to a certain kind of woman."

Patti can see herself in Stock's situation.

While tent pole super hero and sci-fi epics certainly pack theatres, there's a growing audience for films like Old Stock as well, says Leishman.

"It's the size of the story," she says, comparing the movie to Wes Anderson's Rushmore, a film near and dear to Old Stock's director James Genn.

Like Stock, that movie's main character, Max Fischer, is flawed but ultimately filled with good intentions.

"It's small, endearing and charming," he says of the film.

Crowdfunding cult series

Leishman is probably best known for her role as Hannah on the cult series Todd and the Book of Pure Evil. Much to the chagrin of its loyal fans, the show was cancelled last year, but now an Indiegogo campaign is on to raise funds for a Todd animated feature, called the End of the End. "The creators wanted to finish telling the story," says Leishman. "It's a cool way to wrap it up." And it's likely to work; the show's creators are just $10,000 short of their $75,000 goal with three weeks to go. Not that that's a surprise to Leishman. "The success of the show was based on dedicated people watching it."

Something in the Air

Director. Olivier Assayas

Stars. Clément Métayer, Lola Crèton

A semi-autobiographical coming-of-age drama by filmmaker Olivier Assayas, Something in the Air takes itself a bit too seriously. Set in the wake of volatile civil unrest in 1968 France, this inert tale focuses on a young artist/anarchist who bolts to Italy after injuring a guard and discovers a world of drugs, art and sex. The film doesn't so much as progress as lie dormant and so will audiences by the time the end credits roll. Catchy soundtrack though.

Quality Balls: The David Steinberg Story

Director. Barry Avrich

Stars. David Steinberg, Larry David

A bit too weighty with one-sided worship, Quality Balls is filmmaker Barry Avrich's doting documentary on the life of comedian-turned-TV director David Steinberg. A well-educated political and religious jokesmith (who earns the praise of such funnymen as Jerry Seinfeld and Larry David), there's no disputing his provocative influence in the world of comedy. However you may just get fatigued from hearing about it by the end of this film. STEVE GOW

Comedy/Drama

Picture Day

Director. Kate Miles Melville

Stars. Tatiana Maslany, Spencer Van Wyck

Outsiders navigating the social gauntlet of high school is old hat, particularly in independent film. Picture Day flips the script slightly by following two characters: bookish stoner Henry and his former babysitter turned wild-child Claire. Lacking a stable home life and with few friends left at school, Claire pulls Henry out from under the thumb of his conservative parents, taking him under her wing. Shot in Toronto, the story is engaging enough, but it's Tatiana Maslany who steals the show.

Comedy/Drama

Love Is All You Need

Director. Susan Bier

Stars. Pierce Brosnan, Trine Dyrholm

Ida (Dyrholm), a Danish hairdresser, returns home from a final round of chemo to find her husband and his accountant in flagrante. Ida leaves for Italy to attend their daughter's wedding, alone, crushed and yet relieved. She has a meltdown at the airport and crashes into the luxury car of a businessman (Brosnan). Dyrholm is tremendously appealing and Brosnan finds a role that recalls on his own experiences with his late wife. Together they're magic.

ANNE BRODIE

Documentary

Bruce Cockburn: Pacing The Cage

Director. Joel Goldberg

Stars. Bruce Cockburn, Colin Linden

Bruce Cockburn is surely one of Canada's most underappreciated icons, but Pacing the Cage only casually touches on the singer/activist's exceptional career. Produced by his manager, this terse treatment has flashes of revelation but would've been better served with more archival footage than recurrent cheap-looking locked-off wide shots of the singer's recent solo tour. Still, Cockburn's presence and stirring performances will keep curious audiences content throughout the brief biopic. STEVE GOW

Animation

Epic

Director. Chris Wedge

Stars. Colin Farrell, Josh Hutcherson

Parents, get ready for an epic disappointment. Though colourful and exciting enough for the kids, most of the celebrity cast phone in lacklustre voice performances, and the computer animation just isn't spectacular enough to compensate. The story — about little forest people battling an evil corrupter of nature — ends up feeling like a low-rent FernGully (if you remember that one). Funny guys Aziz Ansari and Jason Sudeikis stand out, and bring the only laughs for the over-10 crowd.

The Bling Ring is very Sofia Coppola-y. HANDOUT

What's getting all the buzz at Cannes

Movie news. Forget the real jewelry heist, Coppola's thief movie is stirring things up

MATTHEW PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York

The Cannes Film Festival ends this coming Sunday. So how is it looking as we pass the halfway mark? That is, apart from the non-film stuff: the guy who fired a starter pistol and not one, but two, jewelry robberies. But let's talk movies.

The Bling Ring is very Sofia Coppola-y

No one makes movies like Sofia Coppola — which to some is a good thing, since it means there are less like them in the world. Her latest again wallows among the pampered, wealthy and shallow, only this time the leads (including Emma Watson) are the ones stealing from them. Reviews have been the usual for this polarizing filmmaker, with some finding the film as dumb as its heroes — shades of Spring Breakers and Pain & Gain — and others finding it an incisive and striking embodiment of materialism in the age of Twitter.

Everyone loves Inside Llewyn Davis

The Coen Brothers' latest — about an unpleasant 1960s folk singer (Oscar Isaac) — is being received as one of their scruffy triumphs. Comparisons to The Big Lebowski abound, and the up-and-comer Isaac — in a cast with Carey Mulligan and Justin Timberlake — is supposed to, after this, become a star. And that's great, but it won't be released in North America for another six months.

But everyone LOVES The Past

Asghar Farhadi scored an Oscar and a bona fide art house hit with A Separation in 2011. His second film — also about a divorce, this one with an international cast that includes Berenice Bejo of The Artist — is being heralded as just as strong, which should make Farhadi the biggest-name Iranian filmmaker since Abbas Kiarostami.

Alejandro Jodorowsky is actually back

The Chilean-born wild card was once one of the original midnight movie kings, thanks to his 1970 acid western El Topo. His career since has been bumpy. But this year, the 84-year-old rules Cannes. A documentary about his aborted adaptation of the book Dune — which was to feature Salvador Dali and a score by Pink Floyd — is there. Ditto an actual new Jodorowsky film, his first since 1991's (awful) The Rainbow Thief. The Dance of Reality is being called overlong, but also warm and, best of all, teeming with wild images.

What's hot this summer

The summer movie season has begun on theatre screens across the country. September will mark the beginning of Oscar season, but from now until August our minds are free to turn to sun-bleached mush — and occasionally take in brainier fare.

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York

This is the End

What: The Apatow boys play "themselves" at a Hollywood party taking place during the apocalypse. Not to be confused with Edgar Wright's forthcoming The World's End, which is also a drunken comedy about the apocalypse.

Why: Michael Cera and others get amusingly offed.

Why not: The Apatow clan has been running a bit on fumes lately. A self-referential, valedictory romp after a string of bombs seems a bit desperate.

The Bling Ring

What: Sofia Coppola returns with her version of a crime saga about girls, led by Emma Watson, who use the Internet to track celebrities' whereabouts and rob their homes. Based on a real story.

Why: Coppola has her problems, but they're often the same as her gifts. No one makes movies like her, which is to say no one is making films about the insularity of privilege with actual insight into the insularity of privilege.

Why not: "Paris Hilton as herself."

Berberian Sound Studio

What: Toby Jones plays a sound designer hired by questionable Italian producers to work on a "giallo," one of the sleazy Italian thriller films prevalent during the '70s.

Why: Director Peter Strickland ably captures the "giallo" mood — which is their major selling point — as well as casts Jones.

Is World War Z worth missing a summer night for? HANDOUT

Why not: This isn't for everybody. Is that a negative?

White House Down

What: Remember that movie that just came out where 1600 Pennsylvania Ave was invaded? This is totally different.

Why: Channing Tatum, as a secret service agent, is a big step-up from Gerard Butler.

Why not: Roland Emmerich last made a movie about how William Shakespeare didn't write the works of William Shakespeare.

Much Ado About Nothing

What: Hot off directing the third highest grossing film ever (The Avengers), Joss Whedon turns to Shakespeare, the second greatest writer ever (after Stan Lee, of course), with some of his usuals (Nathan Fillion, Amy Acker) filling out the Bard's comedy of errors.

Why: Even if everyone's terrible, it's still Much Ado About Nothing.

Why not: Some of the cast are reportedly terrible. And even with Keanu Reeves, it would be hard to top Kenneth Branagh's 1993 version.

OPIOID DRUG USERS NEEDED

Healthy men and women ages 18 to 55, who have experience snorting opioid drugs (inhaling through the nose) such as hydromorphone, morphine, oxycodone, heroin or codeine for recreational use, are needed for a clinical research study.

The purpose of this study is to compare the investigational drug with a currently available opioid drug and placebo.

Study consists of one screening visit, one 4-day in-clinic qualification session, four 3-day in-clinic treatment periods, and one follow-up visit.

Financial compensation up to $3015.

Man of Steel

What: Bryan Singer's continuation of the '70s/'80s Superman films "only" grossed $400 million, so it's time for another reboot. James Cavill, who was awful in Immortals, is the new Clark Kent/S-Man.

Why: Michael Shannon as General Zod! From the trailer it looks like producer Christopher Nolan strongarmed director Zack Snyder into not being like himself.

Why not: Can someone please make more fun superhero movies, just for more variety? Comics were once a bit more sprightly than these heavy broodfests.

World War Z

What: It's the apocalypse — again! But with zombies! Again!

Why: Brad Pitt is a very good actor.

Why not: Marc Forster made Quantum of Solace, the only Bond film to actually be boring. That's impressive. In a way. Also, reshoots are always a good sign, yes?

Before Midnight

What: Richard Linklater returns for a third time to Julie Deply and Ethan Hawke's Celine and Jesse, the would-be lovers who meet in Before Sunrise, now a couple with twins.

Why: See "What."

Why not: Because you hate yourself and all things that are good?

Frances Ha

What: Noah Baumbach (The Squid and the Whale) reunites with his Greenberg leading lady/It Girl Greta Gerwig for this low-budget, B&W ode to the French New Wave.

Why: Baumbach is an acerbic genius and Gerwig is refining her unique, laid-back screen presence with every film.

Why not: Baumbach needs to reunite with his Kicking and Screaming stars. Just because.

Michael Douglas as Liberace and Matt Damon as Scott Thorson in a scene from Behind the Candelabra. HANDOUT

Michael Douglas taking on the face of Liberace's lifestyle

Interview. The Traffic actor plays eccentric pianist Liberace in Steven Soderbergh's flashy biopic Behind the Candelabra

RANIA HOBALLAH
Metro World News

Michael Douglas shared his thoughts on Liberace and Steven Soderbergh as his film Behind the Candelabra is set to air on HBO Canada this Sunday.

On his memories of Liberace
I met him once, briefly, when I was 12. At the time, my father (Kirk Douglas) owned a house in Palm Springs, close to Lee Liberace's home. One sunny day, this Rolls Royce stopped in front of the house and Lee stepped out. He was wearing lots of gold and the sunlight was reflecting off his jewelry... He was a sort of pre-Elton John. He invited that style. He was a charming man.

More Douglas

On his identification:

- Quote. "I normally play the bad or ambiguous guy. But once you start doing your research on Lee, you realize that he was a generous man. It's the first time that I play a famous character."

On Soderbergh's offer
In 2001, when we were filming Traffic, Steven (Soderbergh) asked me, 'Have you ever thought of doing something about Liberace?' I wondered how that character could possibly make him think of me… I was a bit paranoid at the time, so I tried to thank him and slip away!

"But then, years later, Steven came across this book, Behind the Candelabra. Richard LaGravenese, the scriptwriter, showed it to Matt Damon, telling him he would be (Liberace's lover) Scott (Thorson) and I, Liberace. This happened right after my cancer, and offering me this role was a great gift. I will be eternally grateful to Matt and Steven for waiting until I got better."

There are almost 2 million seniors living in Ontario today. Over the next 20 years, that number will double. Many will need ongoing care for the first time in their lives.

Who will be the hand that helps?

Moore than a number: Would you ask the men these questions?

Julianne Moore ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Julianne Moore is getting tired of the double standard for women when it comes to getting older in Hollywood. "Men aren't asked about age. Men aren't asked about their children," she tells DuJour magazine. "Not that these things aren't important, but I do feel like it becomes reductive when a woman's life becomes, 'Talk to me about your kids and how you feel about plastic surgery.'" Still, Moore doesn't want to sound like she's complaining, as she's thrilled to have had the career she's already had: "If I saw myself sitting here at 52, talking about my career and how I've been doing it for the last 30 years, I'd be like, 'Are you kidding me? It happened?'"

Stewart wasn't so Swift to seek out Taylor's sympathy

Kristen Stewart

OK, so maybe Kristen Stewart didn't seek breakup advice from Taylor Swift after all. Despite reports earlier this week, sources insist to E! News that the Twilight actress did not in fact hightail it to Swift's Beverly Hills home in the wake of her split from Robert Pattinson. "They know each other and they are friends, but they didn't see each other," a source says of the young women.

Taco, the next generation

Top chefs share their ideas for making over everyone's favourite build-it-yourself meal

Cali Vegetarian

Santa-Barbara-based food and garden blogger Valerie Rice (Eat Drink Garden) uses lentils as the base for her taco, simmering them with tomato, garlic, red pepper, and a dash each of cumin and smoked paprika. The lentils get packaged in a soft corn tortilla and topped with items such as roasted tomatillo salsa and guacamole.

Persian-Inspired

Toss shredded chicken in a sauce of pomegranate molasses, lime juice and honey. Stuff the meat into a taco shell and top with yogurt, fresh basil, mint, scallions, tomato, cucumber and plenty of sumac. "This is a classic combination of Persian ingredients," Louisa Shafia, author of The New Persian Kitchen, wrote in an email.

Pig-in-a-Taco

Stick a pork tenderloin in the slow cooker until it practically melts, suggests Marie Simmons, author of the new cookbook, Taste of Honey. Shred the meat, then toss it with a sweet-spicy barbecue sauce made by simmering honey, chipotle peppers packed in adobo sauce, ketchup, soy sauce, cumin, chili powder, garlic and a swig of cider vinegar for about 10 minutes, or until thick. Top the taco with avocado, thinly sliced radishes and a shredded jicama-and-carrot slaw dressed with chopped cilantro and lime juice.

Steak House

Season a flat-iron steak with salt and pepper, then sear it on the grill, suggests Washington, D.C. chef Spike Mendelsohn, who plans to open a steak frites restaurant called Bearnaise this summer. Wrap thin slices of the steak and pickled red onions inside a soft corn taco and serve with warm bearnaise sauce for dipping. "I love the idea of eating a steak without sharpening my knives," Mendelsohn said via email. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell

I never thought I'd see the day when calorie-counting would be the latest wine trend.

After all, the belly-expanding issue with booze comes from its sugar and alcohol. Wines tend to have low quantities of both, with the average white or red containing about 140 calories per five ounce glass.

I guess when you're watching your weight even that can equal lots of squats. Who came to the rescue? Why, a former real housewife of New York City.

Bethenny Frankel, reality star and business mogul, started her Skinnygirl line of adult beverages so she could enjoy a guilt-free Margarita. After her company sold for bags of dough, the concept was unleashed on wine lovers.

At 100 calories per five ounce serving, the Skinnygirl 2011 California Red ($14.99) hasn't downplayed the alcohol (a respectable 12 per cent) in its freshly crushed blackberry fruit flavour that ends with a bright, juicy finish.

While it's a chillable red that will match with most summertime menus, the skinny on this girl is that she may taste best all by herself. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Just opened: Ardor Bistro

At 59 Ossington Ave. you'll now find Ardor Bistro, a Latin-American haven with Peruvian flavour. Seating about 30, Ardor Bistro has a nice focus on the freshest of seafood. It also has a cocktail program that uses Peruvian spirit Pisco for tasty trinkets. In a city where Japanese and Italian reign supreme, it's nice to see an influx of South American restaurants taking over the scene.

MLB. Encarnacion's four-run dinger propels T.O. past division rival

Edwin Encarnacion hit Toronto's first grand slam of the season and J.P. Arencibia added a two-run homer as the Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles 12-6 on Thursday.

Encarnacion's slam into the left-field foul net off Pedro Strop followed three straight walks by Baltimore's bullpen in the sixth inning. He was matched by Arencibia with four RBIs each for the Blue Jays (20-27).

Starter Brandon Morrow (2-3) looked in control until the eighth inning when he gave up back-to-back homers. He finished the game with a season-high six earned-runs allowed on 10 hits, with five strikeouts and a walk.

Orioles first-baseman Chris Davis hit his major-league-leading 15th home run of the season, while Nick Markakis and Adam Jones also went deep. Star third-baseman Manny Machado chipped in with three doubles.

The game featured the major-league debut for hard-throwing pitcher Kevin Gausman (0-1), who was drafted by Baltimore fourth overall in 2012. The 22-year-old right-hander came into the game with just 13 games of pro experience and no appearances above double-A.

Gausman was effective early on the strength of a fastball that touched 98 m.p.h., but he lasted just five innings after surrendering four earned runs on seven hits with five strikeouts and two walks.

Blue Jays prospect Sean Nolin will make his major-league debut Friday when he takes the mound against the Orioles. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NHL. Kreider powers Rangers to victory

Chris Kreider steered in a pass from Rick Nash 7:03 into overtime, and the New York Rangers stayed alive in the Stanley Cup playoffs with a 4-3 victory over the Boston Bruins on Thursday night.

New York, which erased 2-0 and 3-2 deficits in the critical Game 4 matchup in the Eastern Conference semi-finals, still trails the series 3-1.

The Rangers will need to win again on Saturday in Boston to force a Game 6 back in Madison Square Garden.

The Rangers, who were outshot 40-32, won a face-off deep in their zone, and Nash rushed the puck up ice. He stopped above the right circle and fed a hard pass in front that Kreider skated into and tipped past Bruins goalie Tuukka Rask for his first goal of the playoffs.

Former top Jays Dominican scout dead at 71

Epy Guerrero, a longtime Toronto Blue Jays scout who recruited several top players during the team's glory days, has died.

Reports indicated Guerrero died in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, on Thursday at age 71.

"Our deepest sympathy goes out to the family of longtime Blue Jays employee Epy Guerrero," the Blue Jays said on their official Twitter feed.

Guerrero, who worked for Toronto from 1978 to 1995, is credited with bringing players such as Carlos Delgado, Tony Fernandez and George Bell to the team. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pacers encouraged by play despite last-second miscue

NBA playoffs. Indiana's confidence unwavering heading into Game 2 of Eastern Conference finals

Losing a game at the final buzzer, no less than a playoff game on the road against the reigning NBA champion Miami Heat, would seem to have potential to demoralize the Indiana Pacers.

Or not.

"Our belief," Pacers coach Frank Vogel said Thursday, "has strengthened."

Barely 12 hours after LeBron James scored on a drive as time expired in overtime to give the Heat a win in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals, the Pacers were more steeled than shaken when they arrived for practice at the arena where it all went awry in the series opener. The second-guessing of Vogel's decision to keep Roy Hibbert on the bench for the final play was still going strong, but the Pacers insisted that they're mentally fine.

A short memory would likely help Indiana now, especially with Game 2 of the series back in Miami on Friday night.

"Very encouraged," Vogel said. "Our belief in our ability to beat this team has strengthened after Game 1. Our familiarity in the playoffs, in the playoff series grows with each day, grows with each game, and there's a lot of things we can definitely do better." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Room for improvement

For all the sensational statistical story lines that were born from Game 1 — James' 30-point, 10-rebound, 10-assist effort, Chris Andersen making all seven of his shots, David West and Hibbert combining for 20 field goals — the boxscore alone points to plenty of areas where things could get better for both sides on Friday night.

- In Miami's case, reserves Ray Allen, Shane Battier and Norris Cole combined to shoot 2-for-16. In Indiana's case, George — who finished with 27 points — only had two at halftime, and Lance Stephenson shot just 2-for-10.

Osorio called upon for national duty

Prior to training camp this season, young midfielder Jonathan Osorio was just hoping to catch on with Toronto FC.

Jonathan Osorio
TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The 20-year-old from Toronto has gone well beyond that. Osorio has seen action in 10 of TFC's first 11 league games, scored twice and been singled out for praise by manager Ryan Nelsen.

On Thursday, Osorio added to his resumé when he was called up for Canada's friendly on Tuesday against Costa Rica in Edmonton.

"It's very overwhelming," Osorio said. "Everything's happened so fast, in such a short period of time. I'm really happy. My family's ecstatic. I'm really excited and anxious to get started."

T.J. Grant ready to climb the totem pole

UFC 160. Saturday's fight vs. Gray Maynard 'the next step' in Canadian's MMA future

PHILIP CROUCHER
Metro in Halifax

Canadian T.J. Grant says he's ready for the biggest fight of his career. METRO

T.J. Grant knows this isn't just another fight.

A win on Saturday night at UFC 160 against the talented Gray Maynard, and Grant gets a shot at Benson Henderson's lightweight title.

It's a position the Cole Harbour, N.S., native has never been in before, and it's one most MMA fighters can only dream about.

Still, with so much riding on this fight, Grant is doing his best to not look too far ahead. He's preparing for a 15-minute war against Maynard before a soldout crowd at the MGM Grand Arena in Las Vegas, and is ready to do whatever it takes to get his arm raised in victory.

"I got a job to do and it's the only way I'm treating it right now," said the 29-year-old Grant, prior to leaving for Las Vegas earlier this week.

"I know what the boss said and what's at stake, but at the same time, I'm just thinking about what I have to do to go out there and win this fight. I'm not really thinking ahead."

The boss — UFC president Dana White — announced last month that the winner of the Grant-Maynard fight would get a shot at the lightweight title.

It has made what was already Grant's biggest fight to date even bigger. The bout will mark the first time Grant has appeared on a UFC pay-per-view. It's second bout of an card that gets underway at 10 p.m.

Grant is calling his fight against Maynard "the toughest test of my career."

"I'm definitely not going to take this lightly," he said. "That's all the motivation I need to go in and fight Gray Maynard. He's going after what I want. I want to forward my career and this is the next step."

Grant couldn't go into a fight with much more confidence than he has now. He's on a four-fight winning streak since moving to lightweight, including a January TKO victory over Matt Wiman.
